POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT ASSISTANT PROFESSOR Department of Health Services Administration School of Public Health University of Maryland

The School of Public Health at the University of Maryland, College Park invites applications and nominations for an Assistant Professor tenure-track position in the Department of Health Services Administration with the appointment effective as of August 2015. The successful candidate will be responsible for teaching, research and service activities. We seek a candidate who can provide leadership in the area of health care management on 1) developing the research enterprise with extramural funding; 2) developing and teaching graduate and undergraduate courses, 3) advising and mentoring students; 4) supervising master's theses and doctoral dissertations; and 5) participating in service projects that address the school's mission of advancing a better state of health. The successful candidate must possess an earned doctorate in health services administration, health care management, business, economics, public health, health services research, or related areas and have experience conducting original and applied research. Demonstrated capacity in quantitative research as well as experience with areas in health care management including organizational behavior, operations management, or health care finance is preferred. This is a 9-month tenure-track appointment. Salary is commensurate with qualifications and experience. Recent graduates with their PhD who work in the private sector are encouraged to apply.

The Department is designed to integrate health services, health care management, public health, health policy, and social welfare activities in order to address current health needs, provide leadership in a rapidly evolving health care industry, and anticipate future health challenges in an expanding global economy. The Department's mission is to prepare students for careers in the practice of public health and health services administration and to conduct research and service which strengthen health care delivery systems and their management. The Department includes three degree programs and two certificate programs. The degree programs include the Master of Health Administration (MHA), PhD in Health Services Administration, and the online Master of Public Health in Public Health Practice and Policy. The two graduate certificate programs include a Certificate in Gerontology and a Certificate in Public Health.

The School of Public Health at the University of Maryland is pioneering the future of public health by transforming research into effective strategies and policies that improve lives. The school and department are committed to promoting and protecting health and well-being in Maryland and beyond through scholarship and service.
